

DoD Reorganization Needed For "Safety And Solvency Of Nation," President Says

The Congress, deprived of an opportunity for line-by-line scrutiny of the Eisenhower Administration's first Defense Reorganization in 1953, is set to have a thorough study of the second reorganizing of the Armed Forces.

President Eisenhower on 16 April sent Capitol Hill the draft of the "Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1953." The 1953 changes were achieved by organization action that automatically became effective unless Congress balked. (The full text of the President's bill is published on Page 11).

The President's bill is certain to touch weeks of comprehensive and controversial hearings at the Capitol. The debate will reach other levels, as was evidenced by the Navy League's expression of opposition at its Seapower Symposium in Washington 11 April and the solid endorsement given the plan 15 April by the Air Force Association.

The reorganization fight was brought to a head when President Eisenhower sent the bill to Congress and Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee attacked it the same day.

Citing the impact of "onrushing technological advances in weapons," President Eisenhower said:

Chairman Vinson Smashes At Plan

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee has smashed a sledge hammer into the President's Reorganization Plan.

He took the fight to the House floor 16 April, charging that the President's proposal is designed to "merge the Armed Services" and set up "a supreme general staff."

President Balks At Pay Bill Cost; Forces Plan To Chop $155 Million

President Eisenhower has turned down the $683 million price tag on the House-passed military pay bill as too expensive, and is said to be urging a 1 July effective date.

An alternative proposal, bringing the total cost down to $527,685,000 has been drafted by the Pentagon and delivered to the Stennis Senate Armed Services Subcommittee.

The biggest savings under the new plan come from cuts made in the enlisted rank, although the heaviest individual cuts are assessed against the three top general officer grades.

However, the Pentagon said the new rates proposed for enlisted men still equal or exceed the original recommendations made by the Defense Department.

Whether the Senate group will accept the new proposal, adopt the House plan, approve the original Cordier proposals or prepare its own compromise bill was

Will '49 PubInfo Flop Be Repeated?

President Eisenhower's message on Defense Reorganization creates a possibility that Service Public Information programs again will be slashed. That happened in 1949, just before Korea, and it failed miserably.

Pentagon Surveys Promotion, Personnel Policies; Will Justify "Eagle" Billets

The Defense Department has undertaken a comprehensive review of the promotion flow of all officers and enlisted personnel in the Armed Forces.

Among other important results expected from the study will be "absolute justification for every colonel/captain billet" in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, Jr., disclosed details of the review in a letter to Chairman John C. Stennis of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Military Pay.

Secretary Francis, in announcing the "positive and comprehensive review," said it will involve four major areas: promotion flow, the Officer Grade Limitation Act, the Officer Personnel Act and the Reserve Officer Personnel Act.

OGLA study will involve a reexamination of officer requirements in all of the Services. Secretary Francis said, "In this connection, it is planned to seek absolute justification for every colonel/captain billet in the Services."

The Officer Personnel Act will be reviewed with particular emphasis on the proportion and distribution of Regular officers.

ROPA will be examined with special emphasis upon the future status of Reserve retirements.

Secretary Francis said the structural changes envisioned in the officer corps do not necessarily mean the reduction in any particular rank or grade, but, rather, are confined to establishing minimum requirements consistent with effective personnel management.

He said the entire program "must of necessity proceed at a deliberate and time consuming pace. Such realignment of military personnel management procedures as we have in mind will have a profound effect upon the Armed Forces for years to come and in a critical period in their development."

Global Defense Reorganization May Be Easier Than Unseating Veterinary Corps

PRESIDENT Eisenhower and Secretary of Defense McElroy may find it easier to reorganize the Department of Defense and the control of our global commands than it has been to abolish the Veterinary Corps.

It's been more than four years since the first Pentagon efforts were made to unseat the Veterinary Corps, and transfer many of its functions to the Department of Agriculture.

Not long after he became Secretary of Defense, Mr. Charles E. Wilson stated summarily that he couldn't understand why "the Air Force needs horse doctors." After pondering this question for months, he issued an order to eliminate certain Veterinary Corps functions as one of his last acts in office.

But Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, who had steadfastly insisted that the Defense Department could not abolish an activity created by Congressional statute, immediately wrote to Mr. Wilson's successor, Secretary McElroy, asking that the order be delayed.

Secretary McElroy responded quickly. He said nothing would be done to change the status of the Veterinary Corps until 1 April, in order to afford time for consultation with the Armed Services Committee.

The 1 April date has passed. The consultations have not taken place. The Veterinary Corps is still in business.

A small matter perhaps in the big picture of Defense reorganization. But there's little doubt that Chairman Vinson will raise the issue anew in hearings relating to broadened authority of the Secretary of Defense proposed by the President.

President Eisenhower has stated that one goal of the new Reorganization Plan is to clarify the Secretary of Defense's authority for abolishing activities that he no longer thinks are necessary, even if they were established by act of Congress.

"Pentomic" Iron Curtain Unit

The Army is organizing a "Pentomic" unit behind the Iron Curtain. The 6th Infantry Regiment in Berlin will be reorganized under the Pentomic concept before 1 June, as the 2d and 3d Battle Groups, 6th Infantry.

Personnel strength will remain unchanged, but the units "will become a more effective fighting force," the Army said.

Atomic Sub's Doctor

Lt. Clinton J. McGrew, jr., USN, will be the Medical Officer for the atomic submarine Skipjack, to be launched 26 May at General Dynamic Corporation's Electric Boat Division, Groton, Conn. A 1955 graduate of George Washington University, he has been taking special courses for almost three years in preparation for the nuclear duty.

More Marine Missiles

The Marines are asking Congress for $54.5 million to purchase Navy Terrier and Army Hawk and Lacrosse Missiles. If they get the money, they also plan to buy eight Hawk and two Lacrosse battery sets. At present, the Corps has only one missile battalion—equipped with Terriers.

USN Seeks P. G. Boost

The Navy will provide increased training for scientific and engineering officers. At present, there are 583 students in the Navy Postgraduate Engineering School. The number will be increased to 720 in fiscal '59. Additional boosts are planned annually for the next few years. In 1957 there were only 375 students attending the engineering school.

Greatest Airlift, Says Twining

Congressional criticism to the contrary, General Nathan F. Twining believes "the United States has the greatest airlift capability of any country in the world today." The Pentagon has just completed its annual re-study of the problem, however, and efforts are being made to improve airlift capabilities.

Gander & Goose Breakthrough

Senator Styles Bridges (R-NH) says the next big breakthrough in the missile field may come out of the Air Force Goose and Gander programs. The Air Force denies the existence of any such program as the "Gander" and has said little about the Goose (officially known as the "Bull Goose") except that it is an air-breathing, ground-launched, diversionary weapon built by Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp. to be used by SAC, and that it has been successfully test-fired at Cape Canaveral.

TRAINING INSIGNIA — Personnel assigned to Army training activities will soon be wearing this distinctive insignia, approved by the Department of the Army at the request of the Continental Army Commander. The gold and enamel colored design, measuring slightly over one inch, will be set against a background color of the new Army Green. The motto, "This We'll Defend," will appear in black letters.

Chairman Vinson Hits Reorganization Plan As Leading To "Complete Merger"

From first page—

Mr. Vinson declared, "is unilateral thinking at all costs. There can be no room for discussion, no room for debate, no room for service advocacy, no room for split papers."

The end result, he said, will be "complete merger" and a single philosophy of warfare which Congress will be asked to "rubber stamp" with funds.

Chairman Vinson expressed strong opposition to proposals which he said would:

- Strengthen the joint staff.
- Broaden the powers of the Secretary of Defense.
- Remove the Service Secretaries from operational responsibilities.
- Remove JCS members from their day-to-day role as head of their military services.
- Limit Congressional control of military funds.
- Surrender responsibility vested in Congress by the Constitution.

He countered the President's proposal to increase the size of the joint staff with the suggestion that 75 per cent or more of the military personnel assigned to the office of the Secretary of Defense should be eliminated.

In his hour-long, 30-page address, Congressman Vinson hit at the President's claim that confusion and controversy have resulted from the introduction of new weapons into the armed forces. He suggested that if the President and the Secretary of Defense cannot eliminate the "alleged confusion" it may be "an indication of administrative weakness" that will not be solved by granting "complete authority and control to one man."

Chairman Vinson said witnesses who appeared before his committee during its recent investigation of the nation's military posture "could not identify" any harmful interservice rivalry, and he has concluded that such rivalry does not exist.

"Certainly we have interservice competition," he declared, "and it is a fortunate thing for the American public that we do, and certainly each service desires the funds necessary to fulfill their important missions in our national security and it is a fortunate thing that such is the case."

Congress, he said, must separate these requests and base its judgment on the testimony of all "who are interested parties. Certainly this is a far better system than placing this fantastic responsibility in the hands of one non-elected individual."

During the course of his address, Chairman Vinson made it clear that he was "not casting any aspersions" on Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy "or any individual." But, he said, "the good intentions of one Secretary and one President does not guarantee the same intent in future Secretaries or future Presidents."

He said he deeply regrets the President's "readiness" to blame existing law and the Congress "for the shortcomings and confusion we are told exist in our Defense establishment." The reorganization message, he noted, makes no mention of the fact that the chain of command which is now "so vigorously criticized" was established by the President, himself, in 1953.

He said also he did not discern in the President's message "the words and spirit of mutual understanding and desire to cooperate that so nobly characterized his defense reorganization message in 1953."

The President, in making his 1953 proposals, said "the Congress is a full partner in actions to strengthen our Military Establishment."

Chairman Vinson said he is certain the Congress will continue to subscribe to that philosophy and "will act as a full partner" in considering new ways to strengthen the defense establishment.

He said the present Department of Defense organization is essentially sound but should be "refined" to increase its effectiveness. He said this will not require a "drastic and disruptive overhaul of our military structure," but can be accomplished within the framework of legislation which he has introduced together with representatives Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.) and Leslie J. Arends (R-Ill.), Republican whip of the House (THE JOURNAL 1 Mar.).

The powerful House member said "scientific advances and technological progress may frighten some people into unwise and hastily considered decisions, but I do not believe that they will stampede the House of Representatives or Senate, or the American people."

Navy League Opposes Defense Plan; AFA Gives Support With Reservations

Navy League

THE Navy League, with a membership of more than 25,000, has taken a stand in opposition to major recommendations of President Eisenhower for reorganization of the Department of Defense.

President John J. Bergen said the League, founded in 1902, has adopted a resolution which declares that the Military Departments "be separately administered" by the respective Secretaries.

The resolution declares that Congress should "continue to exercise control of the purposes for which funds are furnished by the Congress, provided that the Secretary of Defense be given discretion as to the allocation and expenditure of funds, to meet unforeseen but vital contingencies, not to exceed 5% of the total sum appropriated for Defense, and further provided that no more than one-third of such funds available for contingent allocation be taken from any one Military Service."

As to command, the Navy League contends that Military Chiefs of Services should be, in fact, Commanders of the Military Forces of their respective Departments.

Further, the Navy League said it "opposes measures establishing, or leading to the establishing of, a Single Chief of Staff and/or a National General Staff outside and independent of the JCS Organizations; and opposes measures establishing administrative procedures which would accomplish the objectives equivalent to the establishing of such Chief of Staff and/or General Staff."

Air Force Association

SUPPORT of the principles embodied in President Eisenhower's defense reorganization plan was pledged this week by the 60,000-member Air Force Association.

At the same time, the association, following a study of the President's proposals by its Airpower Policy Committee, expressed certain reservations, particularly with respect to giving increased management authority to the Secretary of Defense and eliminating separate administration of the military departments.

The President's plan "does not go as far as we would like," said AFA President Peter J. Schenk. "It falls short of attaining a single promotion list for all services, a single Chief of Staff, or a single military service. But it is clearly a move in the right direction."

While urging caution with respect to the centralization of administrative authority at the top of the Defense Department and calling on Congress to impose legislative restrictions on the number of Assistant Secretaries of Defense, the AFA policy group took issue with the proposal to reduce the number of Assistant Secretaries in the several services.

The proposal to continue the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as heads of their respective services while requiring them to delegate service responsibilities to their vice chiefs was called "a violation of the old military principle that 'you can delegate authority but not responsibility.'"

"A better solution," said the commit-

President's Plan—

From first page—

dent Eisenhower told Congress 16 April that a Defense Reorganization is necessary to assure "the safety and solvency of the nation."

The President's bill states that "the intent of Congress to provide a comprehensive program for the future security of the United States; to provide for the establishment of integrated policies and procedures for the departments, agencies and functions of the Government relating to the national security."

Objectives Stated

The preamble to the bill adds that objectives are "to provide a Department of Defense under the direction, authority and control of the Secretary of Defense to include as military departments the Department of the Army, the Department of the Navy (including Naval aviation and the Marine Corps) and the Department of the Air Force."

The preamble adds that the bill will "provide for the unified direction of three military departments under a civilian control of the Secretary of Defense but not to merge them; and provide for effective strategic planning and for unified direction of the armed forces through an efficient command structure but not to establish a single chief of staff over the armed forces; an armed forces general staff (but is not interpreted as applying to the Chiefs of Staff or Joint Staff)."

The bill spells out the establishment and responsibilities of unified or specific commands under the Secretary of Defense.

Silent On Funds

The President's bill contains no provisions relating to appropriation of funds to the Defense Department instead of the individual Services. This will be accomplished by administrative action in the fiscal '60 budget.

The Pentagon wants Congress to provide authority for the Secretary of Defense to transfer funds within major budget categories, possibly on the order of a five per cent authority.

The President's bill contains a feature regarding the relationship of civilian and military leaders of the services to Congress that is certain to create controversy.

The new measure would eliminate present restriction which bars the Secretary of Defense from preventing a Service Secretary or JCS member from presenting to Congress on his own initiative—after informing the Secretary of Defense—any recommendation relating to the Department of Defense that he deems proper.

Won't Alter Status

A high Pentagon official pointed out that this proposed change will not in any way alter the status of such officials as military or naval officers in response to Congressional requests or answering Congressional inquiries. Civilian and military officials will continue to have the obligation of stating their convictions to Congress.

However, the formal procedure of voicing dissent without the necessity of Congressional initiative would be abolished.

Despite the fact that the use of this right has been rare, its formal abolition is certain to provoke Congressional protest on Capitol Hill is a provision which would give the Secretary of Defense authority to transfer, reassign, abolish or consolidate functions provided he gives 30 days notice to the armed services committees.

These committees are certain to point out that such action could be taken without the House and Senate were not in session. They would also undoubtedly demand a method for vetoing an action of the SecDef that is objectionable, particularly in a case where a specific action is established by law.

tee, "would be to divorce completely members of the joint chiefs from service responsibility and make them full-time staff for the Secretary of Defense."

FIRST PUBLIC UNVEILING of a replica of the Polaris intermediate range ballistic missile, now under development for the U. S. Navy, highlighted a Seapower Symposium held in Washington by the District of Columbia Council of the Navy League. RAdm. William F. Raborn, Director of the Special Projects Office, Bureau of Ordnance, unveiled the model before 1,000 Navy League members. The presentation to Admiral Raborn was made on behalf of the industrial team developing the Polaris by Robert E. Gross, Board Chairman of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Polaris missile system manager and prime contractor.

Seapower Symposium Gets The Word On Polaris Progress And Plans

Details of the first firing of a mock-up model of the Navy's Fleet Ballistic Polaris Missile and revelation of a forthcoming underwater-to-air-to-underwater missile highlighted the 1958 Sea Power Symposium.

The 11 April gathering of top-ranking military officials and industry and civilian leaders at the Sheraton-Park Hotel, Washington, D. C., was sponsored by the District Council of the Navy League.

RAdm. William F. Raborn, Jr., Director, Special Projects, Bureau of Ordnance, said the first full-scale dummy shot of a Lockheed Polaris was accomplished 23 March in waters off San Clemente Island, Calif.

The Polaris Chief made the disclosure at a press conference following a luncheon address during which a bas-relief model of the FBM was shown to the public for the first time.

The luncheon guests were shown movies of the missile being fired from a "pop-up" device, which is a prototype of the system to be installed aboard FBM submarines.

Admiral Raborn said the underwater launch was "highly successful" and that one of the major problems was "to get the missile out of a sub without tumbling. Solving this problem, he said, without the use of ailerons or rudders was a "distinct milestone in the launching of undersea weapons." Another major breakthrough, the Admiral said, was the reduction of atomic warhead size.

At the same time, he stated the countdown is quite simplified since "we don't need to fuss or fiddle with the motor." He described the propellant as "a rubberized-plasterized material."

In his address, the Polaris Chief stated, "I firmly believe that we will have actual operational missiles in 1960."

He told reporters that production weapons will cost about half as much as the prototypes. He said that the average life of a "Polaris" will be about five years. After that, portions will have to be reworked to keep it ready. The Admiral also indicated that components of "stacked" weapons will be replaced as newer developments are made.

Admiral Raborn was introduced to the League audience by Mr. Robert E. Gross, Chairman of the Board, Lockheed Aircraft Corp., prime contractor for "Polaris Development."

During the morning session, RAdm. Roy L. Johnson, Director, Long Range Objectives Group, Office of CNO, emphasized that missiles will not mean elimination of manned aircraft. He stressed the point that strong aircraft carrier task forces are necessary to "support National objectives over a wide spectrum of possible situations."

Marine Corps Fights For Bigger Force; Charge Cuts Will Prune Combat Strength

The Marine Corps has stepped up its fight for a bigger force in the coming fiscal year.

General Randolph McCall Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps, has advised Congress (THE JOURNAL, 12 April) that the fiscal '59 Marine manpower ceiling—175,000—places the Corps "in a very precarious position."

On 14 April, Brig. Gen. Wallace M. Greene, Jr., Marine Corps G-3, told a House Armed Services Subcommittee that the manpower cut means that the Corps' "ability to sustain combat will be seriously jeopardized."

He also declared that the reductions will prune security forces to "critical minimums," cut the supporting establishment to "a seriously low level" and reduce Marine training to "the minimum consistent with safety."

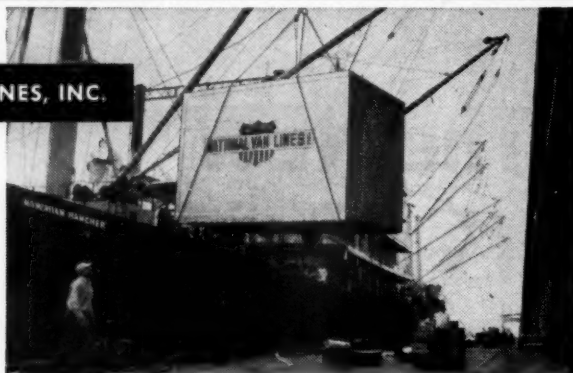

Even after revamping support, security and training forces, he said, the Marines will be forced to keep some combat units in "cadre or caretaker status." In order to meet possible emergency deployments, additional combat forces "would have to be skeletonized to support the mount-out of deploying units."

Beaufort Dedication Slated 4 June

The Beaufort, S. C., Marine Corps Auxiliary Air Station, commanded by Col. H. C. Freuler, will be formally dedicated 4 June.

Principal speaker will be Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-S. C.). General Randolph McC. Pate, Marine Corps Commandant, heads the list of high ranking Navy and Marine Corps officers who will participate.

The 4876-acre Beaufort station supports Marine Aircraft Group 32, commanded by Col. H. M. Elwood. Marine Air Control Squadron 8, based in Miami, will report to Beaufort in August.

WHAT IS "TOTAL ELECTRONICS"?

The picture suggests the answer.

In the new world of missiles and space systems to come, it's the total complex of control, guidance and communication—the whole interrelated nervous system correlating the eye, the hand, the head and the heart of the missile to that of man himself.

And in the company producing that missile, it's the total electronics capability necessary to specify, design, create and test this central nervous system as an integral part of the whole machine—from its conception, through delivery to the customer, to the final completion of its mission.

In the period of a dozen years since the word "electronics" first gained common currency in our industry, Martin has been systematically building toward just such a total electronics capability.

As a result of the rapid evolution in advanced electronics development, today one-third of all Martin engineering manpower is devoted to the electronics requirements of our customers' present and future products. And a major part of Martin's investment is in the special facilities necessary to this new concept of total electronics.

We believe that this capability is essential to our increasingly important function as a prime contractor to all branches of the military.

General White Says AF Needs More Men To Assure Readiness; Asks 10,000 Boost

The Air Force has asked Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy to authorize a 10,000 military manpower increase for the fiscal year starting 1 July.

Making this known to the House Armed Services Committee, General Thomas D. White said the previously projected 850,000 strength will not be adequate to man satisfactorily the 105 wings slated for fiscal '59.

"Since the current program was submitted," said the Chief of Staff, "it appears that some measure of relief for Fiscal Year 1959 will probably be necessary to assist the Air Force in meeting its increasing requirements."

"Looking beyond Fiscal Year 1959, our total manpower requirements may increase significantly."

General White cited three primary reasons for this increased manpower need:

1. Placement of the strategic bomber force and increased numbers of associated tankers in an alert posture on additional dispersed bases.

2. Acceleration of the organization and support of strategic, tactical and air defense missile forces.

3. Operational status for new and improved air defense early warning and control facilities.

General White noted that the Air Force, through severe personnel cutbacks, deactivations and consolidations, has been able to save 94,800 spaces. However, the fiscal '59 budget proposes a reduction of 112,000 military billets.

General White said the Air Force is doing everything possible to save manpower, but he added:

"Nevertheless, our manpower ceilings may be inadequate to support our present and future requirements. . . . The aura of uncertainty surrounding research and development of new weapons and their integration into the combat forces makes it difficult for me to state with assurance what our future personnel strength should be."

AF Speeds Billion Dollar Home Effort

The Air Force said this week that work will be speeded on a billion dollar family housing program to provide 70,484 units by 1960.

Nearly 10,000 have been completed.

A total of 56,820 are planned under Title VIII and use of annual military construction funds. Of this number 4,576 units have been completed and 16,339 units are under construction. The remainder will be scheduled as rapidly as financing details are completed.

An additional 13,664 units will be built under Surplus Commodity and Rental Guaranty Programs, in overseas areas where Air Force organizations are stationed. Of these 4,898 have been completed, 3,742 are under construction and the remainder are to be scheduled.

AF Copter Pilots Honored At FAI Meet

Two Air Force helicopter pilots from the 56th Air Rescue Squadron, Sidi Slimane, French Morocco, were honored at the 51st General Conference of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale 16 April in Los Angeles.

Capt. William M. Knowlton and 1st Lt. Robert H. Busch received the Air Medal for their daring rescue of 50 persons off a stricken French freighter last 12 December. The rescue was made despite 70-knot winds and a murky overcast. Presentation was made by Brig. Gen. Thomas J. DuBose, Air Rescue Service Commander.

The FAI is an international federation of aero clubs which aims to coordinate the development of world-wide aeronautics.

Gen. Ackerman Dropped 102 Numbers On List

Maj. Gen. John B. Ackerman, recently relieved of command of the Thirteenth Air Force in the Philippine Islands, has been reduced 102 numbers to the bottom of the temporary Major General Promotion List, and has received a written admonition for "failing to meet Air Force standards of a senior commander in the field," a Department of Defense announcement states.

General White, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, in announcing this action, stated that General Ackerman had been unusually successful in maintaining cordial relations with the SEATO Air Forces in the Far East, and has in the past shown outstanding ability in other fields. In view of his long record of otherwise satisfactory accomplishments, orders have been issued reassigning General Ackerman to the Air Force Security Service.

AF Computer Study

Air Force headquarters has directed each of its Air Staff offices to determine which of its functions can be aided by use of computers.

Its instructions, in HOI 170-3, note that computer services can "contribute vitally to the efficient and economical functioning of the Air Staff."

Father Flanagan To France

Father Robert F. Flanagan, Catholic chaplain at Mather AFB, Calif., leaves for duty in Greece this month. His successor, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Eugene L. Lamb, is expected to arrive in June.

Lt. Col. Friedman Editor

Lt. Col. Joseph H. Friedman, Commander of the Knoxville, Tenn., Reserve Center, will become Editor of the Air Reservist magazine, in Washington, D. C., in May.

He has served in the Knoxville since 1955, when he arrived from Memphis to organize the Air Reserve Center. The Center now has eight wings in Knoxville and surrounding cities.

AF Names Warrant For Higher Rank

The Air Force has chosen 730 Reserve and 26 active duty Reserve chief warrant officers for increased rank.

The active duty Reserve selections include six to W-4; 13 to W-3; and to W-2.

Dollar Thinking Again Threatens Pay

New schedules of Service pay proposing reductions in the amounts voted by the House of Representatives were sent to the Senate this week in the name of the Department of Defense. (See story on first page; comparative tables on page 3). But no one believes these recommendations for pay cuts originated in the Defense Department.

When the measure was passed by the House on 25 March with the overwhelming vote of 366 to 22, Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), chairman of the subcommittee which gave the problem such long and detailed attention, reported:

"Upon my own responsibility I state that this bill is thoroughly acceptable to the military departments. . . I can say that no one in the military departments has expressed any opposition to the bill, and on my own responsibility I can tell you that it is satisfactory to them."

Mr. Kilday explained that the Departments could not, with propriety, make an official endorsement of a measure passed by one House while it is still under consideration by the other, but he made it perfectly clear that it did meet with their approval.

Subsequently, in the Senate, General Nathan F. Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, supported the House bill and expressed the belief that the increased cost could be absorbed by the transfer of funds within the Defense budget.

When the Department now asks that the House scales be cut, it is apparent that the initiative came not from the Department but from the higher echelons of the Administration. It is another expression of the thinking that blocked the pay bill for so long: that dollars now are more important than increased efficiency at less cost in the future.

Navy's Holloway Plan Too Costly

It is evident from the Navy Department's report to Congress (Page 23) that the Holloway Plan for subsidizing college educations has proved an extremely expensive method of building the officer strength of the Regular Navy. Of the 7,000 young men whose education, subsistence, clothing, etc., have been paid for by the Navy, 5,602 rejected Regular commissions after serving their minimum obligated active duty of three years as Reserve officers. After a minimum three years more as inactive Reservists, these men could be lost to the Navy which so generously educated them. This is not the story of the entire loss, for, as Representative Scrivener pointed out in commenting on the report, many of the students take advantage of up to three-and-a-half years of such free education and then "wash out" so that they owe the Navy nothing.

It is evident that the weakness in this program is its misdirected motivation. Most of the young men who entered upon it apparently were stimulated more by the lure of getting a free college education than by the opportunity to enter upon a Naval career. The less than 20 per cent who elect to stay in the Navy either are the exception, or learn to like the Service after their initial tour of three years. The fact that the Marine Corps is successful in retaining a higher percentage of its Holloway graduates is another tribute to the morale of that staunch organization.

If lack of motivation is the cause of the failure of this plan, then success would be better sought in those areas where motivation has proved the strongest. The most fertile of these areas is in the appointment of more enlisted men and more sons of Service families to the Service Academies. These two groups are thoroughly aware of what Service life has to offer and they go to the Academies with the Service careers as their prime objective. This applies not alone to the Navy, but to all of the Armed Services. It is our belief that appointments from these two categories should be increased to the extent necessary to meet the demand—even if so doing means the expansion of some of the Academies. Such increases would be most valuable contributions to our future defense.

The Truth About Manpower

The importance that Congress attaches to its historic right to obtain detailed statements from the individual Services on military requirements is pointed up sharply in current testimony regarding the manpower situation in the Armed Forces. Leaders of all the Armed Forces in answers to Congressional questions, have made it known that manpower cuts for the fiscal year starting 1 July are below combat readiness requirements.

Secretary of the Army Brucker (THE JOURNAL 29 March) told Congress he asked for an Army of 925,000 compared with the 870,000 sought in the President's budget. General White of the Air Force has described (Page 8) the need for more men in his Service. The Marines are concerned (Page 6) that the proposed force of 175,000 is about 40,000 below their requirements. The Navy also has advised Congress regarding the adverse impact of manpower cuts on manning levels.

It is to be hoped that in all the action on Defense Reorganization, Congress will not lose sight of the manpower warnings and will insist on strength levels that our professional military leaders advise are essential. Congress also should make certain, whatever the changes in the organization of the Armed Forces, that the American people in the future are kept advised of stated military manpower requirements compared to budget requests.

Congratulations From Journal Friends

It was with great interest that I noted the sale of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL to you. I am confident that you will administer it as a continuation of the dedicated service you have always rendered.

Many, many thanks for your constant support of the Red Cross. Today is a rather uneasy one for us because we received word of two disasters late last night, one the flood in California and the other the tornado at Wichita Falls, Texas. This is the beginning of the disaster season, and the next few months will be anxious ones for us. Unfortunately, our Disaster Reserve Fund has been exhausted, so we are attaching great importance to the success of the current Red Cross fund campaign.

With best wishes for your success, always.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Despite the progress science has made in preceding decades, more American ground troops were engaged in battles in WWII, and they incurred four times as many combat casualties as in all previous wars in our history, Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall said. "The casualties of the ground troops were considerably greater than all other American casualties combined," the Secretary pointed out.

50 Years Ago—Haiti presents the most amusing travesty of an army that exists anywhere in the world. Including all arms, the Haitian government calculates that it can put into the field about 8,000 men, of whom 6,500 are generals of division. . . there are now four generals to each private.

90 Years Ago—Flogging in the British Army in time of peace is abolished. The House of Commons, by a majority of 25, has made it illegal for a court-martial to pass this sentence on a prisoner.

SERVICE G-2's HAD A PROBLEM this week. Intelligence experts in all the Armed Forces were trying to figure out just what would happen to their activities under the President's Reorganization Plan. There is no question that intelligence essentially is an operational matter, though it does touch, of course, on logistics and training. Not clear is whether the President plans to create a super intelligence staff in the Joint Chiefs, or whether the present Service organizations for gathering and evaluating information will be continued unchanged.

IT'S A GOOD QUESTION whether the Administration deliberately was vague in spelling out specifics of the increased transfer-of-funds authority for the SecDef. When the President's Plan was unveiled and at a Pentagon news conference which followed immediately, there were no indications of just how much authority would be asked. Congressional protests were instant. At the Press Club last week, however, SecDef McElroy made it clear, in an extemporaneous remark, that the transfer authority he desired is certainly less than 10 per cent, and then only within broad budget categories—for example personnel, maintenance and operations, major procurement, etc.

SECRETARY MCELROY'S STATEMENT was followed this week by remarks of Congressional leaders, after talks with the President, that only limited transfer authority would be asked. Thus, Congress can claim there has been a recognition of its views and a consequent compromise, which probably represents no compromise of what the Administration believes essential.

THE SECDEF'S GOOD STANDING with Congressional Committees, a result of his thoughtful and forthright testimony on Capitol Hill, will be a vital asset to the President in gaining support for the Reorganization Plan. Mr. McElroy wisely asked the House Armed Services Committee to delay hearings until his return from Europe, and scored with his statement that he would shorten the trip because of the importance of the legislation.

THERE SEEMS LITTLE QUESTION that the Administration will gain approval for significant parts of the President's Plan, although not all of it. The transfer-of-funds problem is not expected to create serious difficulties, but the downgrading of the Services to "agencies" surely will.

PENTAGON REPORTERS ARE WARY of the President's proposal to consolidate public information activities of the Services. This was tried in 1949 and didn't work (back page). The New York Times' distinguished Military Editor, Hanson W. Baldwin, has noted that "the Services' public information offices have generally been free from political appointees." He said, however, that "political hacks" have been appointed to public relations jobs in the Defense Department. Mr. Baldwin commented that "the best man the Defense Department had had in the public relations field" has been shifted to another department. The reference obviously was to Mr. C. Herschel Schooley, a Naval Reserve Commander, formerly DoD Director of Information, now Director of Information for the Department of Interior under Secretary Fred Seaton, one-time Pentagon Information boss.

FEARS OF WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN under further centralization of Pentagon Public Information programs are illuminated by the fact that a civilian DoD official repeatedly has blocked the efforts of one Service to make public an announcement that has had security clearance. The subject: construction of some missile sites. The explanation for the policy refusal: "not timely." It's difficult to imagine a more timely subject.

AIR FORCE INFORMATION OFFICERS have been told not to use the initials "AFA" when referring to the U. S. Air Force Academy. The Air Force Association has used "AFA" for a long time and the Air Force says that identity should be preserved. In shortened form, the term "AF Academy" should be used.

PERSONNEL LOSSES in enlisted ranks during the fiscal years '56-'59 will cost the Air Force almost half its total present strength. CofS White has told Congress the Air Force will fail to retain 379,000 airmen during this period. He noted that during fiscal '56-'57 only 19% of airmen in six representative critical skills reenlisted.

BY SERVING OLEOMARGARINE to some of its sailors, the Navy could save a sizeable chunk of money. Under present law, Navy messes are permitted to serve butter only. Bluejackets will consume 7,800,000 pounds this year at a cost of $4.8 million. Legislation pending in the Congress would permit the Navy to use both oleo and butter. If one-third of the butter is replaced by oleo, the savings would be about $1 million.

NUCLEAR POWER TRAINING for Navy officers and enlisted men is being stepped up under the fiscal '59 budget. Sixty-two additional training billets will be set up for officers, 364 for enlisted men. During Calendar 1959, the Navy will have more than 1,200 officers and men assigned to such training, ashore and afloat.

ARMY COMPLAINTS about the lack of airlift have a new corollary in Marine Corps statements regarding shortages of amphibious shipping. Leatherneck leaders are telling Congress that the capability of the Navy and Marine Corps to execute an amphibious assault, other than on a limited based, is "marginal." It will be several years before new amphibious type vessels become available.

MORE THAN 2200 SAC crew members have qualified for membership in the B-47 1000 Hour Club. Top member is Maj. Burton S. Barrett of Forbes AFB., Kans., who has over 3000 hours.

COST ACCOUNTING REQUIREMENTS in the Services will require thousands of recomputations upon passage of new pay legislation. At present, for example, Air Force commanders are told to figure hourly rate costs at $.56 for a basic airman, $2.28 for a master sergeant, $4.33 for a lieutenant colonel and $6.34 for a general.

NAVY OFFICERS assigned to the Bureau of Naval Personnel are observing with interest the fact that their recently installed Chief, VAdm. Harold P. Smith, wears his uniform to duty almost every day. The former BuPers Head, Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., made it a practice to wear civilian attire to work, except upon occasions when the formality of the uniform was particularly appropriate. Navy officers are wondering if Admiral Smith's preference for the uniform presages a change in policy.

AF Tells Families How Often To Clean

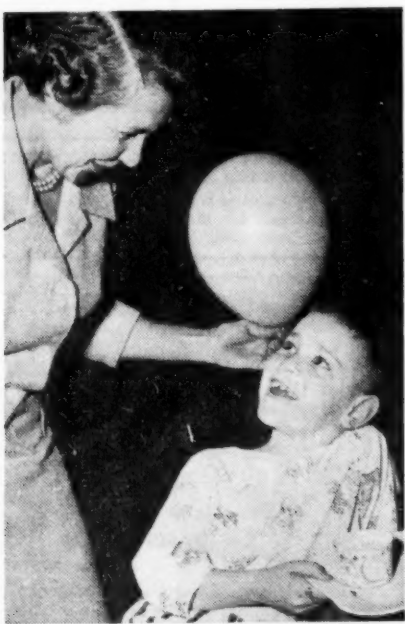

Responsibilities of families occupying Air Force quarters have been outlined in AFR 85-1.

Installation engineers are told to prepare instructions for family housing occupants which "will recommend maintenance methods, types of housekeeping products to use, and how often the work should be done."

The instructions should also describe, the regulation says, "the construction characteristics for each type of quarters, operating and maintenance instructions for all types of installed appliances, and a list of day-to-day maintenance requirements for quarters and grounds."

When considered in the best interests of maintenance economy, the regulation says, occupants should be "required to perform" the following functions: complete grounds care, except pruning, spraying and specialized work; cleaning where applicable, of installed appliances such as exhaust fans, refrigerators, kitchen ranges, washers, dryers, etc.; removal of leaves and other debris from gutters and downspout screens on single-story quarters; snow removal on sidewalks and individual driveways; policing of established playground areas; pest control; replacement of air duct filters, light bulbs and electrical fuses; and "any others that commanders determine as appropriate."

Other maintenance activities, according to the regulation, are to be performed either by installation maintenance forces or by civilian firms under contract.

Duke University Reports Progress On Retired Officer Training Program

THE JOURNAL:

We are writing to express our deep appreciation for the courtesy and co-operation of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL with regard to our program for retired officers.

It may be of interest that we have received approximately 125 inquiries, the great majority of which can be attributed to the JOURNAL and newspaper publicity the program has enjoyed.

For additional coverage, we sent announcements directly to approximately 125 Army and Navy Officers who are retiring in 1958.

We now have 17 applications for admission. A few more are anticipated prior to our projected date of 1 May for completion of admission.

This initial program is being offered on an exploratory basis. Whether we shall wish to continue it will depend upon results achieved. Judging from the interest shown, my appraisal is that we shall wish to carry on. If we do decide to do so, we shall certainly appreciate your continued interest and support.

(Duke University has a program to provide training for retired military personnel who are interested in becoming teachers.—Editor's Note).

U. S. Coast Guard

ADM. Allen Winbeck, Chief of Personnel, has left for assignment as Commander of the 13th Coast Guard District, Seattle.

He will be succeeded by Capt. Richard M. Ross, nominated for rear admiral, effective 1 May.

Admiral Winbeck is married to the former Catherine Alice Jones of Seattle. His father, a retired Coast Guard warrant officer, lives at Aberdeen, Wash.

Reserve Early Out

Headquarters has approved the early separation of Reserve Officer OCS graduates scheduled for release 20 October 1958. Their separations will be effected so they will arrive home on 22 August. Excepted are commanding officers of Loran stations, those who receive an active duty extension beyond 20 October and officers who wish to integrate into the Regular Coast Guard.

Rescue Plans Told

VAdm. Alfred C. Richmond, Coast Guard Commander, has invited the aid of the merchant shipping industry in a plan for more efficient Coast Guard search and rescue operations.

Under the plan, called the Merchant Vessel Reporting Program, all U. S. vessels at sea in the North Atlantic Maritime Region regularly would report their positions and other information as the cross specified areas. The information would be mounted on charts at Coast Guard Rescue Control Centers to show the position of all merchant ships at any given moment.

When a plane or ship is in distress, the charts will immediately show what ships are in the immediate area of the disaster. The nearest ships could immediately be diverted to the scene, thus saving hours in the subsequent search and rescue.

The new plan goes into effect at midnight, Greenwich Mean Time, 30 June.

Academy Selections

Three hundred and ten young men have been selected for possible assignment to the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn.

The group was selected from a total of 1,959 who completed the Academy's entrance examination. If physically qualified, they will report to the academy July.

Among those selected, the following are from Coast Guard families:

Anderson, Bentley B.; Anderson, William A.; Boyesen, Robert F.; Epley, Thomas F.; Evans, John S. and McIntosh, James A.

Also Price, David W.; Roe, Edward B.; Schmidtman, John G.; Sorenson, Elmer; Spence, William H.; Turner, Charles L.

Promotions

The following Coast Guard officers have received temporary promotions, effective 4 April: Harold L. Wood, to Captain; John E. Day, to commander; Charles M. Hayes, to lieutenant commander; Maynard J. Fontaine, to lieutenant.

Born at St. Louis, General Lee was a 1909 graduate of the University of Missouri. He served with the 15th Field Artillery during WWI and later, as Executive Officer to the Chief of Field Artillery in Washington. Prior to WWII, General Lee was Military Attaché at the American Embassy in London and, following Pearl Harbor, was named Chief of

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Jeanette Baker Lee of 1344 30th St., N. W., Washington; one daughter, Mrs. Grosvenor Blair of New York City; and one brother, Mr. Colin

Maj. John Edward Daniels, Arty

Funeral services were held at Grace Episcopal Church, Mt. Clemens, Mich.,
4 April for Maj. John Edward Daniels, who died 30 March at the U. S. Air Force Hospital, Selfridge AFB, Mich. Burial

Holding a Civil Engineering degree from

Colonel Harold W. Jones

Col. Harold Wellington Jones, USA-
Ret, died at his home, 1303 Chicester Ave., Orlando, Fla., 5 April. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., 5 Nov. 1877.

After attending Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1894-97, he entered Harvard University Medical School and received an M.D. degree in 1901. He entered the Army Medical School in September 1905. Graduating as an honorary student, in June he was commissioned in the Medical Corps.

Then began almost 40 years of active duty, interrupted by his retirement for age in 1911, until April 1946.

A great opportunity came when he was assigned to the Army Medical Library (now National Library of Medicine) in 1936. He brought to this assignment wide experience and knowledge gained from his varied assignments and extensive travel in Europe and the Far East and a large volume of well selected reading.

It was on his initiative that the Rockefeller Foundation granted funds for a detailed study of the Library by the Medical Library Association. Among other benefical innovations instituted by Colonel Jones were: The Current List of Medical Literature; the Photo Duplication Service; the organization of the Association of Honorary Consultants; and his arrangement with the Cleveland Medical Library for suitable safe space for the Library's invaluable historical collection including the irreplaceable incunabula, of which the Library holds such a large percentage of all in existence. This was a most important service and the transfer of this great priceless collection to Cleveland insured the preservation of it.

Colonel Jones was Chief Delegate to the ment expense—has produced only 1398 career Naval officers.

Thousands of others—more than 80 per cent of the graduates—have left the Navy as soon as possible after they received their free schooling and completed obligated service.

A report furnished to the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee at the request of Representative Errett P. Scrivner (R-Kans.), shows that the Navy and Marine Corps have commissioned 10,871 Holloway graduates since 1950.
More than 7,000 have completed obligated service; only 1398 (or 19.8 per cent) elected to remain as Regular Officers.

The largest number of withdrawals—almost 86 per cent—have been from the Navy. The Marine Corps' retention rate has been considerably higher, with losses of less than 60 per cent.

Student Cost $1,856 Per Year

In the past, the Navy has testified that it costs about $8,000 to put one Holloway Plan student through college. Revised figures in the new report show that the cost now stands at $1,856 per student, per year. Total cost of the program has been about $150 million.

The students receive free tuition, books, fees, clothing, subsistence, initial travel to the university and from the university to cruise ports and return, plus $50 per month in cash.

In return, they must serve on active duty for three years following graduation (four years, beginning in 1961). Upon completion of their obligated service, they are offered Regular commissions.

Those who do not accept, must take Reserve commissions, either active or inactive, until the sixth anniversary of their original commission.

In addition to those who have already reached the decision-point, about 4,000 others have been commissioned but have not yet completed their obligated tours of duty. Of this number, some 1300 will be required to consider Regular commissions this spring. Unless the current trend shifts, all but about 300 will turn thumbs-down.

Thousands of others still are in school under the program, and several thousand more received partial free-education under the plan but were never commissioned.

"Wash Out" Charge Made

Congressman Scrivner was particularly critical of this aspect of the program.
He said it is so easy to be terminated that many of the students attend college for three or three and one-half years under the program and then wash out.
"Even a few can make the thing look bad," he told the Navy.

The Navy report shows that five per cent of the seniors fail to graduate, eight per cent of the juniors, 12 per cent of the sophomores and 13 per cent of the freshmen.

The annual cost of the program was more than $11 million in fiscal '57 and "costs for preceding years were approximately the same," the Navy said.

The plan—named for Admiral James
P. Holloway, jr., Commander in Chief, Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean—has been in effect since 1946.

More Barracks, Improved Recreation Sought At USMA; Needs Told At USNA

PRESIDENT Eisenhower has sent to Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy reports made by the Boards of Visitors to the U. S. Military and Naval Academies for 1958. Texts of the reports were not made available. However, the White House issued the following summary statements:

USMA

"1. That action be taken to secure authorization and funds for the construction of an additional barracks on a site adjoining the present cadet housing area, so that the expansion thereby permitted will relieve existing barrack congestion.

"2. That high priority be given to increasing the recreational facilities available to the Corps of Cadets, and that supplemental appropriations, if necessary, be sought for the purpose.

"3. That the number of admissions to the U. S. Military Academy be increased so as to make maximum utilization of the facilities now existing or now planned.

"Members of the Board," the report concluded, "take pride in the young men of the Corps of Cadets. Their enthusiasm, and their confidence in the princi-

The Board reported with pleasure that in the teaching of applied and basic science and engineering in the curriculum, increasing emphasis is being placed on basic principles. The Board was also pleased with the excellence of administration and leadership displayed by the faculty and staff.

"The Board stressed the need of budgetary support for the Naval Academy program, including adequate remuneration of its faculty, sufficient funds for proper operation and maintenance, and the provision of needed

1946 he edited the New Gould Medical Dictionary. In this work he collaborated with a number of distinguished contributors.
Upon completion of this work, he became Chief Editor of the Medical Section of the Encyclopedia Americana, and continued in this work for several years.

sisters, Mrs. Charles A. Newhall of Brookline, Mass., and Mrs. Edith Jones, Boston,

Mass., and a stepson, Frank McGurk of Valdosta, Ga.

Colonel Jones was buried 10 April in Arlington Cemetery.

Braddock Biog. Paints Sympathetic Picture

General Edward Braddock, the English General who failed in his eighteenth century conquest of the Ohio Valley, has found a sympathetic biographer in Baltimore journalist Lee McCardell.

In Mr. McCardell's "Ill-Starred General, Braddock of the Coldstream Guards," the author portrays the ill-fated General as a product of his times, not quite as black as historians have traditionally painted him.

The biography, published by the University of Pittsburgh Press, (335 pages, $6.00) goes into great detail on the political and military background of Eighteenth Century England. Mr. McCardell won journalistic fame as a war correspondent for the Baltimore Sun.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

FIRST PHOTO of two-place Convair F-106B all-weather jet interceptor. The elongated nose of the F-106B, two-place version of the F-106A Delta Dart, is apparent in this first ground photo of the new aircraft. Forward sections are fabricated at the Ft. Worth, Tex., plant of Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation and are shipped to San Diego, Calif., for mating with the remainder of the aircraft. The interceptor made a supersonic maiden test flight at Edwards AFB, Calif., last week.

'Punchy Pete's' Busy, Other New Items

"PUNCHY PETE," the Army's camouflaged silhouette-target will assume a dominant position in Army Rifle training. Pete is the central target in the Trainfire method of training, which will soon be adopted by all active Army posts. In the new method, Pete and his silhouette brothers pop up at various distances along the target range. The targets fall down when struck by a bullet.

Installation of the trainfire course at Ft. Jackson, S. C., is nearing completion. Other posts switching to the new training method during Fiscal Year 1958 include: Ft. Benning, Ga.; Ft. Carson, Colo.; Ft. Dix, N. J.; Ft. Ord, Calif.; Ft. Knox, Ky.; Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.; Ft. Rucker, Ala.; and the U. S. Military Academy.

Scheduled for Fiscal Year 1959 conversion to the Trainfire program are: Fts. Lewis, Wash.; Riley, Kans.; Bragg, N. C.; Campbell, Ky.; Hood, Tex.; Devens, Mass.; Meade, Md.; McClellan, Ala.; Gordon, Ga.; Stewart, Ga.; Sill, Okla.; and Bliss, Tex.; and Camp Wolters, Tex.; and Camp Hill, Va.

JET ENGINE TESTS for turbo-jet engines of up to 50,000 pounds of thrust can take place at the new $4 million Jet Engine Test Facility nearing completion at Edwards AFB, Calif. The facility has its own underground fuel system with a capacity of 130,000 gallons, a low and high pressure air supply system, along with special water and fire extinguishing systems.

LIGHT, TWO-MAN 'COPTERS are being tested at the Army Aviation Center, Ft. Rucker, Ala. Designed by the Hughes Tool Company's Aircraft Division, the 890 pound aircraft, designated YHO-2, can carry payloads of 660 pounds.

FLYING SPIES, in the form of the new all-weather surveillance system, will be delivered to the Army in July for evaluation tests at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz. The system, utilizing the SD-2 drone, is manufactured by the Rheem Manufacturing Co.'s Aircraft Division, Downey, Calif.

AN ULTRA-HIGH-SPEED GUN being tested at Eglin AFB, Fla., has fired a projectile 8,000 miles per hour. The 60 caliber gun, which took almost 6 months to build, is fired by helium gas compressed by an explosion-activated piston. It is intended purely for research purposes and not as a weapon of destruction, Eglin officials said.

Machines Will Aid Sill Personnel Work

Army tests of mechanized personnel accounting on the post level have been set for Ft. Sill, Okla.

Authorities described the test as a logical step in the Army's program to mechanize administration to the greatest possible degree, especially in view of the trend to decentralize higher headquarters functions.

Up to the present time, officials noted, personnel accounting has been controlled at the higher headquarters level. (The Navy has just installed an electronic "brain," centered around an IBM 705 computer, to help handle personnel problems in its Bureau of Personnel, THE JOURNAL 12 April.)

ARMY ORDERS TRUCKS

The Army announced it has awarded a $14,293,892 contract to Chrysler Motors Corporation for 3260 three-quarter ton trucks.

Chrysler was also awarded a $3,111,700 contract for 1073 one ton cargo trucks.

Work on both contracts will be done at the Dodge Truck Plant, Warren, Mich.

United Services Auto Increases By 25,000

Col. Charles E. Cheever, USA-Ret., President of United Services Automobile Association of San Antonio, has announced that the Association began 1958 with 318,307 policyholders, an increase of 25,489 over 1956.

There were 442,746 policies in force, an increase of 52,535 over the previous year. Net premiums written during 1957 were approximately $35½ million, some $5½ million more than during 1956. The net underwriting gain during 1957 was slightly more than $7 million.

Colonel Cheever said sound management practices enabled the Association to continue its policy of effecting savings to its members of 36 per cent on their automobile insurance policies and 27.5 per cent on the world-wide Household Goods and Personal Effects Floater.

The United Services Automobile Association, organized in 1922 as a non-profit inter-insurance exchange, is managed by active and retired military officers to provide automobile, household and personal effects, and comprehensive personal liability insurance at cost for active and retired officers, cadets and warrant officers of the Armed Services.

Ton-Mile Costs Called Too High For Cargo Transport Through The Deep

UNDERWATER transportation of fuel and supplies is economically infeasible, according to RADM. L. R. Dasplit, Director of Undersea Warfare, Office of CNO.

He told the Navy League that the Navy converted a fleet submarine to a submerged tanker after WWII on the theory that it would be able to go into areas inaccessible to surface tankers.

Despite the fact that nuclear propulsion makes the conception even more attractive, he said "it's impractical from a commercial angle, costing at least 10 times as much per ton mile."

Although "we can build submerged tankers and cargo carriers today—they can't compete with surface carriers and their costs would have to come from defense funds," he said.

The Admiral continued: "That money can be more profitably spent for forces which would maintain control of the surface. After all, if we lose control of the surface, what are we going to need submerged shipping for anyhow—we'll have been practically licked already."

Since the volume of traffic in wartime "is so great it will take all our existing shipping to carry it... we can't afford to make our existing shipping submerge until it is competitive in price with surface shipping," he said.

B. G. Root Gets Electronic Systems Post, Other Logistic Shifts In The Services

Brig. Gen. Charles B. Root, Deputy Commander of Middletown, Pa., Air Materiel Area, will become Commander of Air Materiel Command's Electronic Defense Systems Division, 220 Church St., New York City.

General E. W. Rawlings, Commander of AMC, said General Root also will become AMC's Ballistic Missile Early Warning System Manager.

The Electronic Defense Systems Division is in charge of AMC logistic activities in the Distant Early Warning and the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment systems, both extending into the Far North.

Col. J. P. Walters is the present Commander. He will attend the Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala., in August.

COL. GEORGE C. HOZIER, USAF, former Chief of the Industrial Resources Division in the Directorate of Procurement and Production, AF Deputy CoS for Materiel, has been reassigned as Air Force Plant Representative, AF Plant Number 6, at Lockheed Aircraft's Georgia Division, Marietta. He succeeds Col. Edward J. McRay, Jr., who becomes Air Force Liaison Officer at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

CAPT. THOMAS H. BELL, USN, has been named Deputy Chief of the Purchasing Division, Military Clothing and Textile Supply Agency, Philadelphia. He replaces Col. H. O. McGillin, USA, new Chief of the Agency's Inspection Branch. Captain Bell resides with his family at 627 Shadeland Ave, Drexel Hill, Pa.

LT. COL. HAROLD L. JONES, USA, has been reassigned from Inspector General to Chief of the Management and Review Division of the Brooklyn Army Terminal, N. Y. With his wife, he resides at 7917 Ft. Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn.

COL. EDWARD F. KENT, USA, has been named Judge Advocate of the Army Transportation Terminal Command, Atlantic, Brooklyn Army Terminal. He resides with his family at 131 74th St., Brooklyn.

Sperry Gets Talos Award; Grumman Tigers To Japan; Sylvania Hustler Work Expands

SPERRY GYROSCOPE CO., Great Neck, N. Y., has received a $13 million Navy contract for Talos guided missile system computers and related equipment. This supplements previous contracts totalling nearly $63 million for production of major components of the Talos and Terrier missile systems.

GRUMMAN AIRCRAFT ENGINEERING CORP., Bethpage, N. Y., has announced that its F11F-1F Super Tiger supersonic jet interceptor has been chosen for use by the Japanese Self-Defense Air Force. Production of the Super Tiger will start in 1959, with 300 of the planes produced before 1962. The majority of the planes will be built in Japan.

KOPPERS CO. INC.'S Metal Products Division, Baltimore, Md., has developed and successfully tested at the Patuxent Naval Air Station, Md., a completely portable jet-engine silencer. The silencer reduces jet noise by as much as 35 decibels, equivalent to a 95 per cent reduction of the impact upon the eardrums.

SYLVANIA ELECTRIC PRODUCTS, INC., Waltham, Mass., has announced receipt of an additional $23 million contract for expanded production of the electronic countermeasures system for the Convair B-58 Hustler. The contract brings the total awards for production of this system to $54 million. The company also announced that Col. William N. Snouffer, USAF-Ret., has been named Project Manager for the Plato anti-missile-missile system.

REPUBLIC AVIATION CORP. says it will save more than $4.5 million this year on production of the F-105 supersonic fighter-bomber. The savings will result from 600 conservation measures worked out by Republic's 48 internal departments.

BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO., Rochester, N. Y., has been awarded a Philco Corporation contract for major optical components of the Navy Sidewinder air-to-air missile.

Navy Hails Deep Freeze Work By Caterpillar

A Certificate of Merit—the Navy's highest award to civilian organizations—has been presented to Caterpillar Tractor Co. in ceremonies at Peoria, Ill.

The certificate was awarded for outstanding service in the development, manufacture and production of specialized tractors for Operation DEEP FREEZE I, the exploration and construction mission in the Antarctic.

RADM. E. J. Peltier, Chief, Bureau of Yards and Docks, on behalf of the Secretary of the Navy, presented the award to President Harmon S. Eberhard.

Designing, testing and production of specialized tractors had to be completed within 5½ months, Admiral Peltier explained, because delay of even a few weeks would have meant loss of a whole operating year.

"Assigning its best production and engineering talent, Caterpillar Tractor Co. insured completion of this equipment in time to meet schedules, though hindered by delays beyond its control," the Admiral said.

"Despite these factors, the Contractor completed delivery without claims for extra payments.

"The excellent cooperation extended by all company personnel involved," he continued, "reflects the highest integrity of purpose and professional ability. Navy representatives reported that the cooperation of the contractor under this contract was 'Outstanding.'"

How Far Will SecDef Go To Centralize PubInfo Activities? Didn't Work Before

A big question at the Pentagon this week was how far Secretary of Defense McElroy and Assistant Secretary Murray Snyder will go in carrying out the President's directive to centralize military public information activities.

Not only the Armed Forces and the press, but the American public at large, the Congress, and Industry have a big stake in the outcome. (Some Memo Comments, Page 12).

The President in his Defense Reorganization Message did not spell out particulars on revised public information procedures. He said only:

"I have directed the Secretary of Defense to review the numbers as well as the activities of personnel of the various military departments who engage in legislative liaison and public affairs activities in the Washington area. I have requested that he act, without impeding the flow of information to the Congress and the public, to strengthen Defense Department supervision over these activities and to move such of these personnel and activities as necessary into the Office of the Secretary of Defense."

Now it will be up to Mr. Snyder, former White House Deputy Press Secretary, to recommend to Secretary McElroy the specifics.

If Mr. Snyder desires an iron grip on military public information, he need not even propose a new directive.

'49 Directive On Books

He has only to urge reinstatement of a 1949 directive—never rescinded—which ordered the Services to slash to 15 persons each the number engaged in Pub-Info activities in Washington.

That order of March 1949, designed to establish "central control" of the dissemination of information, though not officially abrogated, was disregarded with the advent of hostilities in Korea.

The reason: it just didn't work.

Veteran military reporters had forecast that centralized control would deprive newsmen ready access to skilled professional military men and civilians in public information offices of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, with a consequent adverse effect on the flow of information to the public.

These predictions proved to be correct and the Services were authorized to strengthen their depleted Public Information activities.

Although the 1949 directive foresaw a strength of 285 in the Defense Department Office of Public Information, actual strength today is 103.

New Weapons Accent Problems

The fears of newsmen that were expressed at the time of the 1949 directive are accentuated today in the light of new weapons developments.

Reporters say that now, more than ever, with the fantastic technological advances it is essential that they have ready access to professional military men for gathering and presenting the news.

There is little question that if the Defense Department should insist on destroying the effectiveness of Service information offices in favor of strengthened centralized control, many top officers and civilians in Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps public information activities will seek other outlets.

A review of the record of appointments to key civilian posts in the Defense Department public information set-up during the past decade will show that both the Truman and Eisenhower Administrations, there have been a number of appointments of persons who lack the background and experience necessary for this highly specialized work.

Mr. Snyder, a longtime newspaperman, is eminently qualified as a public information authority, but such was not the case with his predecessor, Mr. Robert Ross, who resigned his post under considerable Congressional fire.

Military Men Are Trained

The Services, which throughout history, have realized the vital importance of keeping the American public informed, have made certain that outstanding men were assigned to head Public Information programs. These men have brought to their assignments a broad background of command and staff experience.

Many have had cross-Service training. For example Maj. Gen. Arno Luebbe, the current Air Force Information Services Chief, who is a graduate of the War College, the Naval War College, as well as the Air War College.

"End Runs" a Prospect

If Secretary McElroy and Assistant Secretary Snyder attempt to put clamps on newsmen getting their information from the most authoritative sources—namely the military professionals—the initiative of the press will not be subdued.

Newsmen somehow, as they have done for years, will find a way to get their sources. The point is, however, whereas at present they do this through the Service information people, who know what is going on, a rigidly centralized operation would find embarrassing reporters not hesitating to make "end runs" without notifying anyone about their activities.

Industry Will Have Trouble

Industry representatives who have built up close working relationships with the individual Services certainly will find the going tougher in obtaining clearance for releases, speeches, interviews, etc. under a centralization. In their operations, industry representatives in Washington and throughout the Nation count heavily on the professional knowledge of public information people.

It's still too early to determine how far the Secretary of Defense will be revamping public information activities to go slowly. Certainly, it is hoped will be the case. It's no simple proposition.

Caterpillar DW20 Tractor with No. 456 LOWBOWL Scraper is pushloaded by a D9 Tractor equipped with a pushcup. With eight other DW20s it is working on construction of runways, taxiways and other facilities at Bergstrom Air Force Base, near Austin, Texas. Altogether, the fast-moving DW20s are getting up to 20,500 cu. yd. in a 20-hour working day on hauls of 1 to 2½ miles round trip.

Job report on Bergstrom A.F.B. construction

Near Austin, Texas, the H. B. Zachry Company is building runways, taxiways and other facilities for the new Bergstrom Air Force Base. This is a big operation—2,370,000 cu. yd. of excavation. In addition, it calls for 300,000 yd. of select base material and 503,000 yd. of concrete pavement. Runways are 12,250 ft. long, 300 ft. wide.

Work started in April, 1957, and is being handled by nine Caterpillar DW20 Tractors with No. 456

LOWBOWL Scrapers, two Cat D9 Tractors, six D8s, two D7s and seven No. 12 Motor Graders.

The DW20s are getting up to 20,500 cu. yd. in a 20-hour working day. Rough material, too—clay, limestone conglomerate, shale and black gumbo. Round-trip hauls have varied from 1 to 2½ miles.

Powered by a Cat Diesel Engine, the four-wheel DW20-No. 456 rig has the power and stability for big-volume hauling at high speeds. It's rated at 18 cu. yd. struck, 25 heaped. Ten-speed transmission offers a selection of speeds to handle any job. Easy to see why the Caterpillar DW20-No. 456 wheel unit has a proved economy record!
